BRENTANO™

NO. 50 COLLECTION

Celebrating a Landmark of Textile Innovations

From humble beginnings in their 1990's workshop, Design Director Iris Wang and her husband, CEO, E-Kwan Chen, have grown Brentano's line from eight textiles to an impressive range of upholstery, faux-leather and drapery fabrics, with the 50th collection being their largest launch to date.

Inspired by the historical evolution of design and the pursuit of innovation, Brentano's 50th collection celebrates both artistic progression and technological advances in textile fabrication. The demand for luxurious, high performance textiles with bold, sophisticated colors and modern concepts became the springboard for this vibrant assortment. Expanding on the values of today's contemporary creative elements, these new introductions infuse several of Brentano's most beloved patterns with a new, fresh aesthetic and superior, performance enhancing qualities.

In her own words, Iris feels these pieces are "focused and nostalgic, reflecting on the past whilst always having a dynamic vision for the future." Collection No. 50 highlights Brentano's commitment to the brand's underlying principles of beauty + performance.

"This is a notable moment in our history for our team as a whole. We really specialize in great patterns and strong color work, but in saying that, I think what sets us apart is our constant want, and need to always keep learning; new techniques, new suppliers, new inspirations etc. are what helps us grow and build the Brentano of the future. Our No. 50 collection does exactly that, bringing back previously successful patterns with new updated performance features and a refreshed look." said Wang.

4234 Samara

Pulling inspiration from Maple Fall, an early original design by Design Director Iris Wang, Samara balances beauty and nature in this piece-dyed, jacquard velvet. The 54" width large-scale pattern of Japanese maple leaves creates a pixelated cutout that highlights the unique weave underlying the velvety pile to create a subtle shading effect. "The textile mimics the way the light would hit the leaves on the tree," states Iris Wang. "Samara's pile is woven to move in three directions to create a beautiful shadow effect adding depth and dimension to the striking colors and richness of the velvet." Samara's beauty extends well beyond its abstract pattern, with over 75,000 double rubs and Brentano's Tri-sistant finish, the densely woven textile features supreme durability to withstand high-traffic environments. In 9 romantic colorways including Cranberry, Midnight and Blush, Samara is the optimal choice for opulent interiors. *The slub yarns that appear are inherent to the design.
